How To Use Google Maps In A Mac App

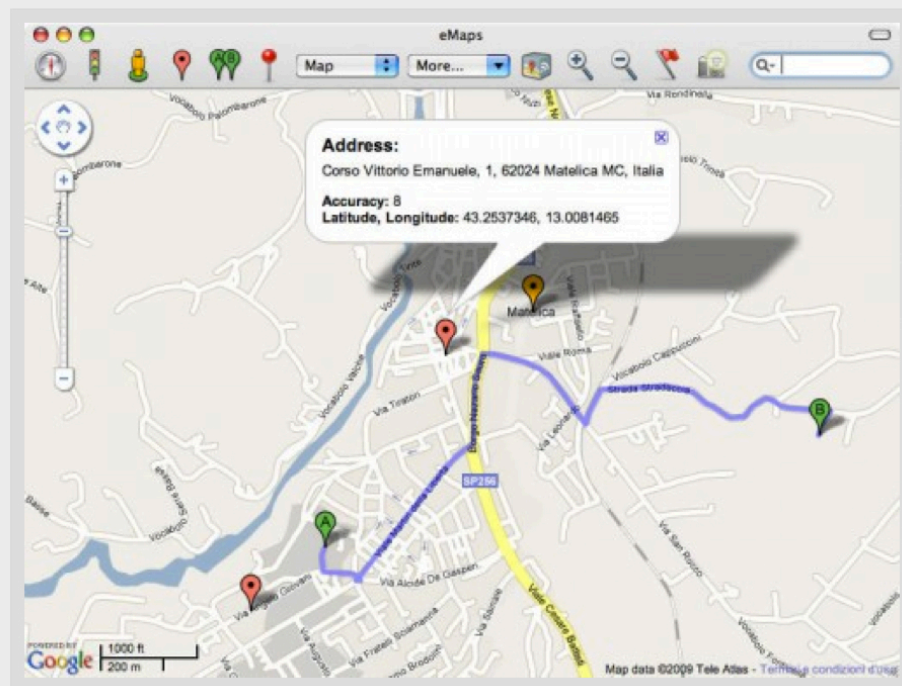

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 2011

It doesn't take much effort to waste plenty of time in Google Maps. It's one thing to use Google Maps to map out a destination, but just playing around is more fun. For that, you need a Mac app that plays around with Google Maps.

Think of an App with a Map

That's what eMaps is. It's an app with Google Maps built in. And it's easier to use and more productive than using Google Maps in a browser window.

eMaps does all the basic street maps, plus satellite and street view images. There's built-in driving directions and traffic information (not for every country). Does this look familiar?

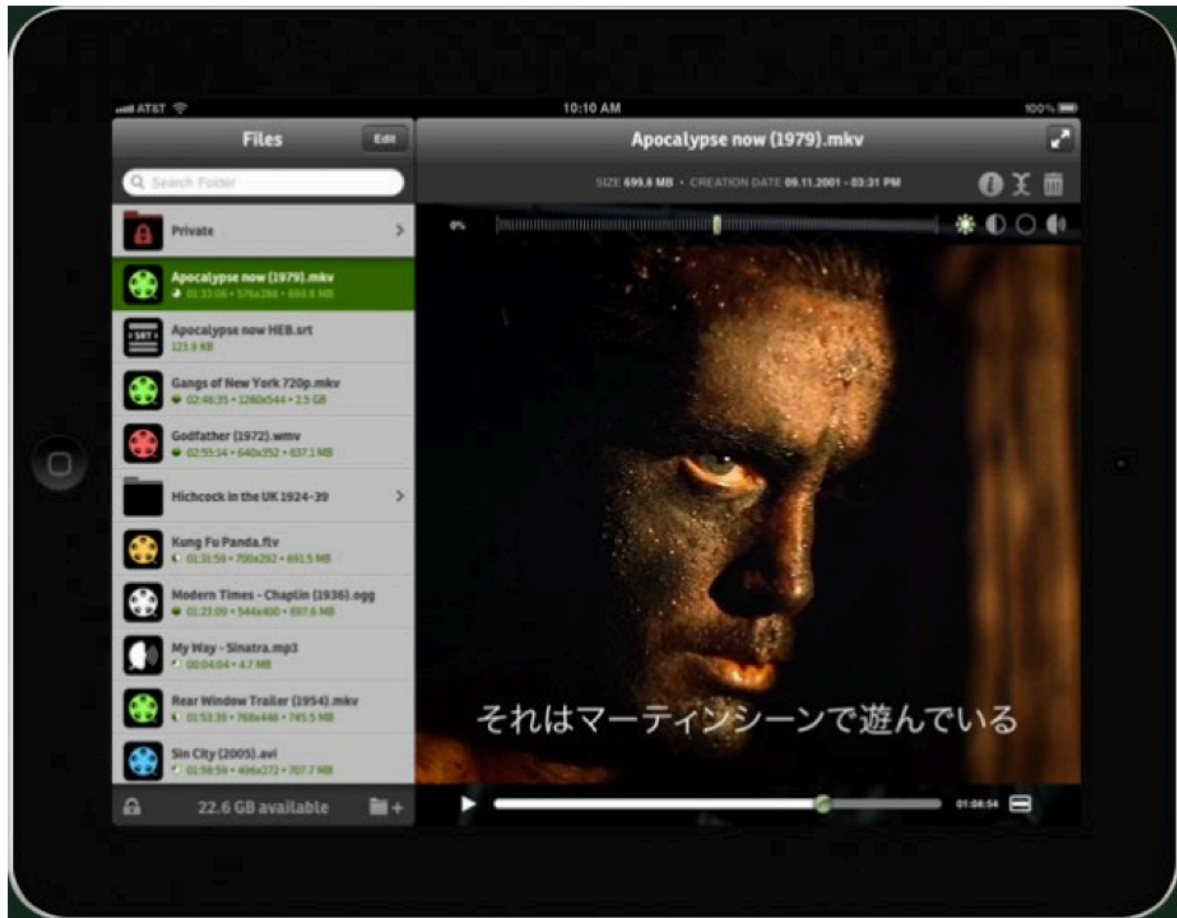

The difference is that eMaps isn't in your browser so you have more tools at your disposal in the Toolbar.

It's Playing 2.0 Might Just Be The Best Answer To VLC On Your iPad

When I recommend an iPad video player, I tend to recommend CineXPlayer, which will throw pretty much any format you throw at it without converting it. It does have one crucial issue, though: it can't handle AC3 sound.

Enter the rather awkwardly named app "It's Playing 2.0." Like CineXPlayer, it'll play any video on your system, including FLV, AVI, MKV, OGG and WMV. It can load subtitles. You can scrub through a movie using variable speed controls. And it does AC3 sound! Hurrah.

There's more, actually. There's on-the-fly video adjustment that lets you fix up color, contrast and brightness as the video plays, and you can also crank up the volume to absurd levels, just like VLC... perfect if you're trying to watch a video across the room.

A great app, and even better? It's just $2. Cheap!
